

The 25 most relatable 'Friends' episodes as the show turns 25

"Friends," the ubiquitous sitcom about six New York City companions, turns 25 this year.

ubiquitous 普遍存在的

sitcom 情景喜剧

In honor of this, we've made a chronological list of 25 of the most honest and funny-because-it's-true "Friends" episodes.

chronological 按时间顺序排序的

jealousy 嫉妒; 猜忌

"The One Where Ross and Rachel Take a Break" (Season 3, Episode 15)

Rachel is killing it at her new job at Bloomingdales, but that also means she's working long hours and doesn't have time to celebrate her anniversary with Ross. Jealousy and drunken decisions ensued and fans still debate what constitutes cheating on one's partner. Eventually, the phrase "we were on a break!" would be screamed into the lexicon.

ensue 因而发生

lexicon 辞典

"The One With All the Thanksgivings" (Season 5, Episode 8)

This episode's famous scene of Monica dancing with a turkey on her head has been commemorated through everything from T-shirts to GIFs. But let's not forget why she broke out the poultry millinery: It was to cheer up Chandler.

poultry 家禽

bone-headed 呆头呆脑的

He lost a toe many Thanksgivings ago when he was a bone-headed college student who took an interest in her after she lost weight and the two are now secretly dating.

"The One Where Everybody Finds Out" (Season 5, Episode 14)

Secret hook-ups in a friend group are common, but it's time to come clean when it's clear that things are serious.

hook-up 连接; 耦合

Chandler and Monica use this episode to finally admit their commitment to each other. More importantly, this episode is also a tale of why people shouldn't be ashamed to seek psychiatric help — particularly after a jolting life experience.

psychiatric 精神病学的

jolting 震动；颠簸